

Long glass, long chill... and not an ice cube in sight

The Happy Provenance of CHILLSTACK

---

No one likes seeing a barman stack ice in a glass.
Where will the drink go? Into the gaps in the ice.
The real question is 'where will the ice go?'
The answer is of course 'Into the drink'.

Now Pedro pours a mean mixer, and in Spain they don't pour by halves. This is of course muy beuno. But long drinks have short lives in hot climates. How could we stack a chill in a drink without ruining its flavour? Luckily, with CHILLBALL to guide us and a few of Pedro's generous measures, we soon had a stack of cool ideas.

We say 'one for the road.' The Spanish have a better saying: 'La ultima penultima' - 'the final last-but-one'. Whether it's your first drink or your 'almost last', its best enjoyed clean, pure and undiluted. And you don't have to be in Andalucia...(but it helps).

David: inventor and student of Spanish sayings.